

Layton's

I remember as a toddler walking with my grandmother from Kingstable Street Eton, over Windsor Bridge and up Thames Street to Layton's at the corner of the High Street and Station Approach. On that corner was a 'First Class Restaurant and Tea Rooms'. There was a very large-framed shop window where upper class ladies could be seen with coffee or tea and perhaps one of the restaurant's pastries.

On two or three days a week my grandmother and I would call in to enquire if there were any of yesterday's cakes or pastries. Fortunately for us we always came away with a very welcome bag full.

Ellen Dollery

You can read about one of those upper class ladies visiting Layton's in Hester Davenport's book.

Writers Win Windsor

£6.50

A revised and expanded edition of the book first published in 1995

by Hester Davenport

'Absolutely absorbing and pleasurable' -
John Handcock, President of the WLHG

'a narrative evocative in its range and delightful to read' - Raymond South in Windlesora 15

